Administration, teachers conflict

New principal and new policies bother some GSMS faculty

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor
and Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

A new principal and a new mandate from the school board and superintendent have made for a rocky transition at Golden State Middle School.

Principal Janette Clark, formerly an assistant principal at Sacramento's Hiram Johnson High School, took over the helm at the West Sacramento middle school this summer after former GSMS principal Diane Smith was transferred to the new Southport Elementary School.

A disagreement between Clark and some of the teachers over new policies at the school has become public.

Clark didn't respond to calls from the News-Ledger Monday or Tuesday.

But Dr. Dennis Kelleher, superintendent of the Washington Unified School District, said Clark is charged by him and by the school board with improving the accountability of the school's faculty.

"The relationship (between Clark and the faculty) is probably rocky and turbulent," he stated. "It's not smooth and I think the reason is her style is very much different from her predecessor. Some of the changes she's making are very much desired by the school board members. For example, they want more participation by parents."

The result has been that the administration at Golden State has scheduled parents into the classrooms to help -- but some teachers say this has been done without regards to their own classroom plans.

"Having more parents on campus is a wonderful idea, but teachers need to have a say in how we go about doing that," said Chris Olsen, who teaches English and history at the school.

Superintendent Kelleher said that a parent had been told by staff at GSMS that her presence there as a volunteer "was taking away jobs" from faculty members. But the parent he referred to told the News-Ledger this hadn't happened.

Parent/volunteer Sandy Westlake explained that under the previous administration, "I thought we weren't wanted there. We would volunteer and would be told 'we'll call you,' and we'd never be called." She added that under the new administration, the situation has improved.

"I think the parents that come onto campus now are welcome," she said, crediting Principal Clark for the change.

But Westlake also stated she was never told by staff that she was "taking away jobs" by volunteering. That rumor may simply have come from "a group of parents" trying to figure out why their volunteer efforts were not always being accepted in previous times, she said.

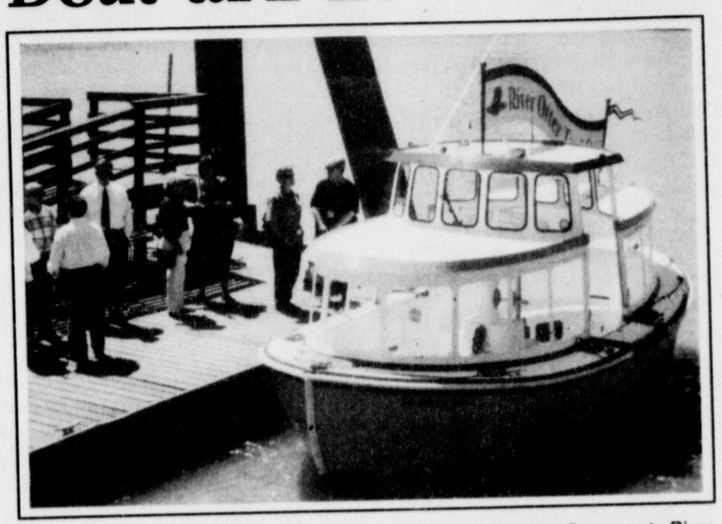

Teacher Olsen also commented that teachers should be invited to participate in decisions such as how to spend the money gained in the school's contract with the Pepsi soft drink company as an exclusive soft drink vendor on campus.

"Teachers should be allowed to make some suggestions on how best to utilize those funds."

Some teachers are also resentful of a new policy requiring them to sign in and out as the leave and return to campus for any reason. But Kelleher responded that for reasons such as workman's compensation liability, the district needed to know when its employees were

Boat taxi in W. Sac.—

The River Otter Taxi Company now makes five stops along the Sacramento River, including Old Sacramento and Raley's Landing. The River Loop takes approximately one hour and runs from 11:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. weekdays and until 9:15 p.m. on weekends. The Tower Bridge Shuttle runs weekdays from 11:30 a.m. to 1:35 p.m. The price for the River Loop is $5 per person, $2 per child; the Tower Bridge Shuttle is $1 each way. Call the ticket booth at 446-7704 for schedule details, or visit the Web site at www.riverotter.com.

Man tries to lure girl

West Sacramento police are concerned about an incident in which an adult male apparently tried to lure a 13-year old girl into his car several days ago.

The incident occurred in the afternoon, when a suspect described as a white adult male apparently tried to convince the girl to enter his car as he stopped near her on Maple Street. the car was described as a newer model, light blue, four-door, mid-size sedan.

Anyone with information is asked to call the police department, 372-2461, ext. 240.

Apartments face foreclosure

A West Sacramento apartment complex faces foreclosure proceedings.

Village Gardens Apartments, at 900 Todhunter Ave., is scheduled for trustee's sale Aug. 26 in attempt to recover $1.26 million owed to a lender.

A spokesperson at the apartment said that the complex was in receivership, but further details were not forthcoming from the owner by press time yesterday. A listing in the county recorder's office listed the owner as Columbine Properties, Inc., of Davis, but no telephone listing was available for the company.

There was no indication that tenants would be facing eviction because of the financial troubles.

About Town:

Four generations at Club Pheasant

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

The Palamidessi family moved to the West Sacramento area in 1935.

"My father was a farmer," explained Peter Palamidessi, whose family is now into its fourth generation of owning and operating the well-known and much frequented Club Pheasant on Jefferson Boulevard. "He grew tomatoes, alfalfa, corn, sugar beets and grain. When he bought the building that is now the Club Pheasant, it already had a pretty interesting history. It had been used as an agricultural lab to test soil, and after that, it had actually been a speak-easy. I've been told it was quite a place in its day, with a dance room that had a bright red velvet ceiling and a back room for gambling and drinking."

In 1937 Peter's father gutted the old building and the bottom floor slowly began to evolve into the restaurant and bar it is today.

"My earliest memories aren't really of the restaurant business," recalled Peter. "We had a couples of horses and my dad also raised hogs, chickens, and rabbits, and it was my responsibility to take care of the animals before and after school. Plus we were pretty much out in the middle of nowhere, and I didn't even have a bicycle because there were no paved roads. Outside of a couple of nearby dairy farms and a few houses which had been built near what is now 15th Street, there was really nothing to speak of between us and the Tower bridge."

In the mid-1940s, Peter's father, mother, his oldest sister and her husband decided to get serious about the restaurant business.

"They had ordered some chicken in a San Francisco restaurant and quickly came to the conclusion that my mother's homemade chicken tasted a lot better," said Peter, "and it wasn't long before my mother had created a wonderful menu and all my sisters were working as waitresses. We still use many of my mother's recipes at the restaurant to this day."

PETER and LORRAINE PALAMIDESSI

The Club Pheasant was actually first called the Golden Pheasant.

"My family had a big sign made up," said Peter, "but it turned out that a restaurant in San Francisco had already copyrighted that name, so we just changed 'Golden' to 'Club' and saved all the money it would have cost to get a new sign."

By the 1960s, Peter and his wife Lorraine, whom he had met while attending high school in Clarksburg, became co-owners of Club Pheasant and the restaurant continued to grow and prosper.

"We added the banquet room in 1965," said Peter, "and we began to attract even more customers. Plus that is about the time our children began playing a bigger role in the family business and that was a lot of fun. Over the years, we have also been able to employ hundreds of young men and women from the West Sacramento area, and Lorraine and I have really enjoyed giving many of those young people their first work experience."

Peter and Lorraine, who have been married for 46 years, have three sons, Pete Jr., Paul and Perry, and a daughter, Patti. They lost another son, Danny, to leukemia in 1991. They also have eight grandchildren.

"We happen to have the best

'I can remember never wanting to disappoint (my parents), because they put so much effort into trying to properly raise us.'
PAUL PALAMIDESSI

mom and dad in the world," said Patti proudly. "They gave us such a strong foundation, and it has served all of us well, especially when times have been hard. They taught us about the importance of trying to be good people, and I can still remember how we would all march off every Sunday morning to nine o'clock Mass -- no excuses. And not only are they great parents, they are my best friends."

"They have always been there for us," said son Paul, "and we can always count on them. They showed us by example the importance of hard work and how to be responsible for your own decisions, and I can remember never wanting to disappoint them, because they put so much effort into trying to properly raise us. They're still giving us a helping hand every chance they can and to tell you the truth, they're simply the best parents a person could have."

"They let us make up our own mind about going into the family business," said Pete Jr., who along with Paul, Patti and Perry, now own Club Pheasant. "It's a great thing to be able to respect and look up to your parents. I'll never forget how strong my mother was when we lost Danny. In many ways, she was the closest to Danny, and yet she was the one who helped us all get through it. Everyone should be so lucky to have parents like mine."

"I really enjoy working with my brothers and sister," said Perry. "Sometimes when I'm really dead tired, I just remind myself that my efforts aren't just for me, but they're for my whole family, too, and that makes everything worth it. And I would do just about anything for my parents. If mom and dad said they wanted me to dig a ditch to China, then I'd pick up a shovel and start digging."

Peter and Lorraine are officially retired from the restau-

Candidates line up for city, school district positions

With the filing period expected to close on Friday, six people have filed candidacy papers for three available seats on the Washington Unified School Board ballot in November.

Ardeene Westvik, a retired educator who currently holds one of the two available four-year terms, has filed to run again. She is joined by challenger Stanley Dal Butler, who lists his occupation as a fleet superintendent.

The other incumbent in position to run for a four year term is David Farmer, a police lieutenant, who told the News-Ledger he plans to file later this week. Should he fail to file papers by Friday, other challengers will be granted a one week extension period to file for the race.

Also on the ballot is the remaining two years of the term left vacant by the resignation of former board member Hal Williams. For that race, challengers thus far include Richard B. Drew, an equipment operator/minister; Edward "Ed" Hocking, a government program analyst; Karl Machschefes, an elementary school teacher; and James J.C. Myers II, a pastor.

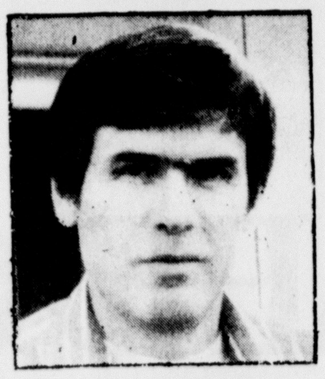

Also on the November ballot will be two seats of the West Sacramento City Council.

As of Tuesday, no one had filed candidacy papers for this race. But incumbents Wes Beers and Christopher Cabaldon (the current mayor and mayor pro tem, respectively) have joined challengers James Cahill and Marna Miller (both veterans of the 1996 city council race) in taking out candidacy papers in preparation for filing. Cabaldon has announced that he will indeed run again.

But should either Beers or Cabaldon fail to file, there will be an extension for other people to file for candidacy during the next week.

Has anybody seen Chester, the bicycle-chasing dog?

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

I am one of those pet lovers who owns a dog who is absolutely convinced that he's entitled to a nightly walk. In fact, I'm pretty sure my pooch considers his evening stroll a kind of doggie constitutional right, and as soon as the sun starts to go down and the air begins to cool off, he starts pestering me to get out his leash. In a not very disguised attempt to force me to get a move on it, he plops down right in front of me, puts on his most pathetic facial expression, and stares at me until I finally give in and say, "Okay, okay, we'll go!"

Anyway, the other night, as my wife and I were taking our cocker spaniel Mikey on his evening drag, a young man on a red bicycle with a dog of his own happily trotting alongside him suddenly passed by our position. They both came to a stop about a block ahead of us and the young man began having a conversation with some friends of the opposite sex who were standing on the corner. While the humans were talking away, the dog turned around, spotted Mikey and hurried back to exchange greetings with him. He was black, with handsome white feet and a huge head, and they both seemed to be very pleased to have run into each other.

"Isn't that dog a pit bull?" my wife asked me with concern as Mikey and his new friend continued their introductory sniffs.

"He looks like he's part pit bull," I agreed. "But the other half could be just about anything."

"Well," said my wife, still a little worried, "they seem to be getting along pretty well." "Oh, he's a sweet dog," I assured my wife. "Look at that wagging tail and those kind eyes."

The young man on the bicycle, his conversation with his friends concluded, glanced back at what I assumed was his dog and yelled, "Come on, Chester, let's go!"

With that, he began pedalling off into the night and was quickly out of sight. But much to the surprise of both me and my wife, Chester hadn't moved a muscle. In fact, he seemed to be much more interested in hanging out with Mikey than racing off after the man on the bicycle.

"Hey," I said to Chester, "you better get going. It's getting dark out here."

"The man on the bicycle is going to come back for him, isn't he?" asked my wife.

"Well, it doesn't exactly look like it," I said. "But Chester probably knows his way home. I wouldn't worry about it. Come on, let's call it a night. I'm all walked out."

A few minutes later, when my wife, Mikey and I finally reached our driveway, we couldn't help but notice that Chester was still right behind us. "Here," I said, handing my wife Mikey's leash, "you take Mikey inside and I'll get on my bike and see if I can find Chester's owner."

I wasn't 20 feet away from my house when I quickly discovered that Chester liked to trot off after anybody who happened to be riding around on a bicycle, and the two of us hurried off in search of his owner. We went up and down just about every block in the neighborhood, but the man on the red bicycle was nowhere to be found. I finally decided to go on back home, and when Chester and I arrived at the front porch, my wife and kids were waiting for us.

"You couldn't find Chester's owner?" asked my oldest son, who was somehow already on a first-name basis with a dog he had never even seen before.

"Nope."

"What are you going to do now?" asked my wife, who had no doubt told my kids that Chester's name was Chester.

"I think we should all call it a night," I said. "Chester will go home when he's ready."

"We better get him some food," suggested my youngest son.

"He'll never leave if you do that," my wife reminded him, "but why don't you get him some water."

"Chester isn't exactly the prettiest dog in the world, is he?" observed my middle son.

"Look," I said, "it's getting late. Everyone just go to bed and take my word for it, Chester will be gone when we all wake up in the morning."

And that is what I believed, until I got out of bed the next day and strolled into my oldest son's room. At the foot of his bed, on a lovingly arranged pile of soft blankets, was Chester, snoring away.

"Ty," I said to my son, shaking him awake, "what in the world is Chester doing here?"

"Well," explained my sleepy-eyed son, "a hour or so after everyone went to bed, I took a look outside, just to make sure he was gone, but he was still on the front porch. So I went out and played with him awhile, and when he wouldn't leave, I decided to let him sleep with me. He's really a great dog, Dad."

"But he's not ours," I reminded my son, "and you better get him outside and let him go to the bathroom. And if I were you, I wouldn't be telling your mother that Chester slept over."

Once outside, it wasn't long before Chester spotted what appeared to be another stray dog and immediately raced off after him, never to be seen by the Fisher family again. "You know," said my disappointed son a few hours later, "I feel used. I really liked Chester."

"Why?" I asked.

"Well, I liked the way he followed me around everywhere I went -- plus he was so ugly he was cute."

West Sac All Stars still in fight for division title

Last week, West Sacramento Little League's 11-12 year-old All-Stars beat a good Auburn team by a score of 3-2 to win the Section title at Twin Oaks park in Rocklin. The victory qualified them to move on to Divisional play in Foster City, where they promptly won their first game against Oak Ridge Little League, 5-0. They next played Walnut Creek, and lost for the first time in tournament play by a score of 7-3.

Little League All-Stars play in a double-elimination format, so even though West Sacramento's loss to Walnut Creek dropped them out of the winner's bracket, they were still alive in the tournament and immediately went out and beat Paradise Little League behind the dominating pitching of Chris Schaffer, who tossed a one-hitter. Chris also hit two home runs, and Caleb Grant added one of his own to help secure the victory.

"This team has no quit in it," said Pam Geivett, wife of manager Mort Geivett. "They were disappointed by their first loss, but they went right back out the next night and started a new winning streak."

West Sacramento has continued to get great pitching from Chris Schaffer, Paul Holcomb and Caleb Grant. Their run production has been excellent, with Schaffer, Grant, Ryan Ketterling, Gabe Gomez and Johnny Lopes giving the lineup plenty of punch. Ketterling has had an incredible 12 hits in his last 16 plate appearances in tournament play and has had a number of key swings of the bat. On defense, Lopes, Schaffer, Tyler Geivett and Justin Lucas have all contributed great plays.

As the News-Ledger goes to press, West Sacramento finds itself in the difficult position of having to win its next four games if they want to capture the Division title, which will qualify them to move on to San Bernardino for the next level of competition, which ultimately leads to the Little League World Series in Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

"As the team has continued to win," said Mrs. Geivett, "they have had to travel farther and farther from home and expenses have gone up. The league would really like to thank Whitey's Jolly Kone, Smart and Final, and Safeway for contributing food, beverages and meals to the team. Glass West owner David Blake has also helped with some of the costs we've been incurring, as have some of the parents, and we also appreciate the City of West Sacramento loaning us vans to help transport the kids to the games. If anyone else would like to help defray some of the costs, their help would be very much appreciated."

Geivett's number is 371-1637.

Editor's note: At press-time, it was learned that West Sac won its Tuesday night game 6-3.

The San Francisco Giants are on a modest four game winning streak as they take their show on the road into New York. In the race for the wild card spot, the Giants are ahead of the Mets by two games but trail the Cubs by 1 1/2 games. Looks like the trades the Giants completed last week made an impact on their playing attitudes. The Giants were involved in a bench clearing brawl, led by Barry Bonds, with the Phillies. Can you believe it, the Giants are showing emotion! The Giants, who have been playing well lately, added newly acquired centerfielder Ellis Burks to their line-up and promoted reserve outfielder Marvin Benard to the lead off spot. After their critical series with the Mets, the Giants will return home this weekend to host the Atlanta Braves and then the wild card leading Chicago Cubs Aug. 10-12.

The A's, who swept the Cleveland Indians last weekend, enjoyed their largest attendance of the season. The three game home sweep was the A's first since Sept. 1996. A's outfielder Matt Stairs, who leads the team with 20 HR's, has been carrying the team on his shoulders. Stairs homered in five consecutive games, tying the team record for consecutive games with a homer set by George Alusik(1962) and matched by Dave Kingman (1986). The A's promoted pitcher Jay Witasick from Triple A, and released 36-year-old Kevin Mitchell.

The 49ers won their first preseason game beating the New England Patriots 14-13 last Sunday at 3Com Park. The 49ers and Raiders are preparing for road games on Saturday Aug. 8th. The 49ers head south to San Diego (7 p.m.) to face the Chargers, while the Oakland Raiders travel to Texas for their first pre-season encounter with the Dallas Cowboys (6 p.m.)

West Sacramento's undefeated Willie Jorrin will fight the main event on promoter Don Chargin's Thursday, August 20th boxing show at the Arco Arena. This will be Jorrin's last tune-up fight before he gets his title shot in late October. Seven bouts are scheduled for this show, including a women's bout, and Napa's undefeated Juan Arias will go after his 22 KO in 24 fights. Tickets are priced at $23, $33, and $43 are on sale at the Arco Box Office.

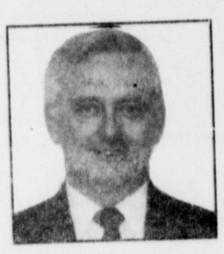

Don't forget indoor soccer action on Saturday, August 8 between the Sacramento Knights and the Dallas Sidewinders. Game time is 7:00 p.m. at the Arco Arena. For ticket information 928-3650.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial:

Graduating from Pepsi M.S. to Coca-Cola High School

Two West Sacramento schools have joined forces with soft drink companies who offer cash, merchandise for resale, and program support in return for the right to be the exclusive soft drink vendor on campus.

For Golden State Middle School, the partnership is with Pepsi. For River City High School, it is rival Coca-Cola.

The deals are fine. Yes, most kids drink too much soda and -- let's face it -- these drinks are junk food and empty calories. But these companies also sell fruit juice drinks and water and, should the student body choose, these alternatives will also be available as part of the bargain.

The deals, thankfully, don't go as far as the deal a school elsewhere in the country struck with one of the soft drink brands. As part of the promotion, the school required its student body to come to school for a day and pose wearing shirts promoting the soft drink.

One student rebelled by wearing a shirt promoting the opposite cola. He was sent home from school.

Obviously, in America no student should ever have to be forced by a school to wear a shirt promoting a soda company. It doesn't look like West Sacramento's schools have anything of that nature in mind.

One homeless man reported yesterday that his trick in avoiding arrest while illegally camping on the West Sacramento Riverfront is to maintain a current fishing license ($27.50 a year, he said) and have a pole nearby in the water. When a police officer asks him what he's doing, he is able to respond that he is fishing -- which, unlike camping, is not illegal.

The man doesn't even bother to bait the hook, and if he by chance catches something anyway, he just throws it back, since he has no utensils to cook it with.

(Moments after imparting this knowledge in the lobby of the local police department, this individual found himself handcuffed by an officer for being inebriated in public. The man, who had come to clear up a warrant, found himself under arrest for a new violation, perhaps proving that he didn't yet have all the angles worked out for his lifestyle "system.")

Clausen family appreciative

The family of Jim "J.C." Clausen would like to thank the West Sacramento Little League, and all others who participated in restoring the baseball scoreboard at River City High School. We sincerely appreciate the time, money and effort that has been put forth for the benefit of the young ball players of West Sacramento. Thanks again everyone for helping keep Jim's memory alive.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The News-Ledger received a number of "letters to the editor" this week responding to an article which appeared not in the News-Ledger, but in another local newspaper last Wednesday. The article dealt with conflict between administrators and some of the teachers at Golden State Middle School. Several of the letters follow (two which were submitted unsigned could not be printed because the News-Ledger has a policy against printing anonymous letters).

Faulty logic

Regarding the West Sacramento Press "Winds of change at GSMC (sic)," July 29: The journalistic integrity of John Hartmire must be questioned, if for no other reason than to point out the faulty logic. (It would be far too time consuming to edit the article for spelling and grammatical errors.) Hartmire quotes board member Irene Eklund, "The positive leadership (Janette Clark) brought to the district is wonderful. It's what we have needed for a long time." Clark mentions her intention "to turn Golden State around." These two quotes imply that prior to Clark's arrival at GSMS the campus was in desperate need of help. Clark assumed her current position when Diane Smith, currently the principal at the new Southport Elementary, left Golden State. Could it be possible that the Washington Unified School District board members placed an ineffective administrator at its brand new, highly regarded, anxiously awaited elementary school in the affluent Southport area of West Sacramento? Probably not. Diane Smith exemplifies the qualities of an effective, competent principal worthy of such a highly regarded position. Faulty logic only punctuates Mr. Hartmire's article that is riddled with poor syntax, erroneous information, and an utter lack of command for the English language.

Exaggeration & twisting in article

I am writing in response to the article about Golden State Middle School (GSMS) that appeared in the West Sacramento Press on July 29, 1998. I have been a teacher at GS for more than 10 years and feel compelled to address the overall tone presented in the article. Perspective in journalism and politics is an interesting thing. Anything can be exaggerated, twisted, or taken out of context to make something look better or worse. I noticed that all three techniques were utilized throughout the article. The article states that Miss Clark, the new principal, has met some resistance from the school staff, but that most are "onboard." What do I know? I know that most of the staff at GS is confused, unhappy, and frustrated with the "changes" that have occurred at Golden State during the last 4 to 5 months. It began with the loss of our last principal, Diane Smith, and has escalated to the loss of numerous unhappy staff members. The last time I saw such an exodus of Washington Unified School District employees was when Superintendent Dr. Del Alberti was fired and interim principal (Cathy Bardo) at GS was let go even though the staff and parents petitioned to keep her. It is interesting to note that Dr. Alberti went on to another school district only to be named Superintendent of the Year for California and Cathy Bardo last year received Middle School Administrator of the Year for California. This is the caliber of people that the "spoiled kids" that teach at GS have had the opportunity to support in the past, if only briefly.

The real question is "What was the purpose of the article in Wednesday's newspaper?" It did state that it is important that "we work together to create the best possible school for our kids." ..."everyone -- teachers, students, parents, staff, all of us - [are] accountable for what goes on at the school..." while at the same time promoting the idea that the teachers at GS are irresponsible and immature. Who's perspective was it reflecting and what was its purpose (to help 'us' work together better?)? Is this journalism, or politics? These questions may never be answered, but one thing that the article has made very clear to me, we are further away from working together and trusting each other then I can ever remember us being through all the ups and downs I have experienced over the last ten years.

"Hack journalism"

Re: "Winds of Change At GSMC (sic)", West Sacramento Press, July 29. Press editor John Hartmire claims that Principal Janette Clark is vigorously trying to implement much needed reforms and all of the stuck-in-their-ways-tenure-protected teachers are trying to undermine her because she is making them sign in and out when arriving and leaving the campus.

To write this article about teachers, Hartmire interviewed a parent, the president of the Washington WUSD Board of Education, and Principal Clark. From this, he claims to have a handle on the attitudes and thoughts of the teaching staff.

To write such an article without interviewing a single teacher is hack journalism at its worst.

If Hartmire had interviewed any teachers at Golden State, he would have found that the sign in sheets are the least of anyone's concern and that no one is at all worried about Ms. Clark's Parents on Campus program being a front for administrative spying. The truth is that the staff at Golden State are true professionals who take pride in their work.

To be fair, there are some serious concerns among the teachers at Golden State, but these concerns center around issues like class size and a large amount of vacant teaching positions currently being filled by unqualified substitute teachers. The reason that the staff is concerned about these issues is that they directly affect the quality of education that we provide to our students.

It is painfully obvious that Mr. Hartmire has an axe to grind with the Golden State staff, or perhaps with teachers in general. Could it be that he is still bitter about the inferior quality of education he received, wherever that might have been, as is demonstrated by his poor writing and proofreading skills? (By the way, I do know that GSMC is not a correct acronym for Golden State Middle School. I was quoting the headline as it was written.)

Anyone who visits Golden State will see a staff of hard working and dedicated teachers who considered the education of their students job #1, not the conniving and complaining teachers lounge lizards of Mr. Hartmire's imagination.

Newspaper article "missed story"

At a time when public education issues have captured national headlines your article (West Sacramento Press July 29), erroneously titled "Winds of Change at GSMC (sic)", missed the story in your own backyard. The real story of Golden State Middle School is one of steady improvement despite obstacles. It is an uncommon story threaded with common themes: understaffing, overcrowding, insufficient and outdated textbooks, rundown facilities, and high teacher and administrator turnover.

Let's start with the good news. Students' achievements measured by Standardized Test Scores from Golden State Middle School have continued to show growth for the past few years. Success enough to select Golden State Middle School's principal Diane Smith to lead the new school in Southport. While the verdict is still out on the '97-'98 school year results for the SAT9, the preliminary figures appear to confirm the teachers of Golden State Middle School are doing something right.

The unfortunate news begins with overcrowding at Golden State Middle School. This is a fact. Current class sizes number as high as 39 students. These are not numbers on a roll sheet. These are middle school students trying to learn while sitting on the floor or table or in the corner. What is going to happen when September arrives bringing with it the students transferring from other districts unaware our year-round schedule begins in July not September? History has proven these students do appear.

Unsurprising but sadly, Golden State Middle School needs funding. Students notice classroom carpet not mended but held together by duct tape. Students question why there aren't enough classroom novels to take home to read. Students view these inadequacies and others as a reflection of our opinion (as a school and a community) of the importance of them as individuals. It is a hard question to answer.

Even more troubling is the fact that vacant teaching positions and administrative positions remain unfilled as Golden State Middle School enters its second month of the school year. These positions are not covered by the same substitutes each day. Students' educations suffer from a lack of consistency. As more teachers get frustrated and leave the district to pursue higher paying jobs in neighboring districts the vacancies grow.

If The West Sacramento Press seriously desires to keep the community informed on the sate of education in West Sacramento, The West Sacramento Press needs to do some Research. Research statistics on past and current test scores. Study the educational marketplace, current programs focused to reach students, and insufficient funding. And read educational research, which studies not only schools' roles in educating students but also the roles economics, the community, and the family plays in the lives of successful students. These issues are the true educational concerns which face West Sacramento.

Support school staffs

The article about Golden State Middle School that appeared on the front page of the West Sacramento Press, July 29, 1998, exemplifies why veteran teachers are leaving the District and fully credentialed folks seek employment elsewhere. People want to work where they are valued members of a team, respected by the community; where they're treated at professionals; where there's mutual respect and good communication, and a sense of trust. People want to teach where there is good curriculum that is tied to the state standards and aligned with the standardized test. Staffs want -- and need -- to be supported in their job, not publicly and unfairly chastised.

The staff at Golden State puts in many extra hours working on District committees and taking courses to assure that the students in their classes are getting the best prepared teachers who introduce the latest in teaching techniques. Programs for children, such as PROJECT FOSTER; Cooking Club; BEST Club; Ski Club, and Historic Living Simulation, are organized by teachers who are giving their own time, before and after school, so that the students will have additional enriched learning experiences.

The article has not only been a major blow to the morale at the school at a critical moment when the school year has just begun, but a violation of the Golden State team effort as well. The teachers at Golden State continually strive to improve the quality of education in the district, and unfair, negative portrayals of them and their school do nothing to foster good will and enthusiasm for the task at hand -- providing the best learning possible for the students. The old Chinese proverb says: The longest journey begins with a single step. It's absolutely imperative for the entire West Sacramento community to make sure that step is not backward!

Right kind of flood protection

Can Fazio/Matsui, and Doolittle both be right?

The first two have worked with our City Council and city staff to be sure that their legislator votes for levees on the American and Sacramento as well as the bypass and weirs are improved to protect us, but Doolittle has made his first priority a new dam which would do nothing to protect us from flash flooding. Our City Council (at least the majority) understands, but it appears that the members of the Board of Supervisors don't.

With the public's support, "right" will carry.

OPINION

Guest Commentary:

Keeping criminals off of schools' personnel rosters

From Dan Lungren
California Attorney General

In the spring of 1997, we were reminded by the tragic death of Rio Linda High School student Michelle Montoya that we must be extra vigilant when it comes to creating a safe environment for our children.

After the tragedy in Sacramento, I worked with the legislature to place into law what should have been obvious -- violent and serious felons should be banned from working in our schools near our children.

My office worked with Assembly Members Barbara Alby and Deborah Ortiz to ensure that background checks on school employees are accomplished in a timely manner by utilizing new technology called Live Scan, which digitally records and electronically transfers the print to my office, replacing the old system of processing fingerprint cards mailed to my department.

I am pleased to say our efforts to outfit every county with at least one Live Scan terminal is already underway. Los Angeles Unified School District is now online with 12 Live Scan machines, as are other school districts and counties. More than 100 terminals will be available for use by school districts throughout the state, with many of them placed in the sheriff's department or the school district itself.

No longer will schools have to go through the messy, time-consuming method of rolling prints from ink to paper and mailing a card to our office.

Now, school district applicants can simply place their hand on the glass screen and the print will be transmitted electronically to the Department of Justice. The applicant's fingerprint it compared to the approximately 9 million criminal prints in our CAL ID system --which is a computerized database of criminals from across the state -- largest such database in the country.

This rapid capture and delivery of the print will allow us to return a full background check to the districts or hiring agency within 72 hours in 95 percent of the checks. Within three working days, school officials will know if their job applicant has previously committed crimes in California.

Additionally, with the use of Live Scan by law enforcement in each county, a newly arrested criminal, anywhere in the state, will be logged into the system within hours of the booking.

While law enforcement will continue to use their computer system which allows them to check criminal backgrounds immediately, Live Scan gives school districts a similar rapid response and provides a degree of confidence that convicted criminals are not driving school buses or teaching children in the classroom.

'Yes, we have come upon convicted criminals seeking to work at a school. The numbers are slim -- only about 5 percent or 6 percent of school applicants. But the fact that one child molester or one rapist may have been prevented from working in a school makes all the time and effort worth while.'

Our office processed about 1 million fingerprint background checks last year for school employees, law enforcement agencies, investment services and for others applying for credentials, licenses or permits, such as teachers and day care providers.

Of all the prints we process, approximately 29 percent are school related. That means we're taking a very close look at a large number of people -- people you entrust with the care of your kids every day for six or seven hours a day.

Yes, we have come upon convicted criminals seeking to work at a school. The numbers are slim -- only about 5 percent or 6 percent of school applicants. But the fact that one child molester or one rapist may have been prevented from working in a school makes all the time and effort worth while.

By early fall, we will have a Live Scan terminal in every county in California, providing a more timely answer to the question of whether someone is not only qualified -- but safe enough -- to be teaching our children.

For parents, it is a reasonable expectation that when their children arrive on a school campus, every reasonable measure has been taken to ensure their safety.

Live Scan allows us to give that assurance and not hold up the process of hiring the good, caring teachers we need to ensure that our children receive the education they deserve.

End "social" promotion at schools

High expectations equal great results, high standards equal great results. We need to move beyond the idea of social promotion in our schools because our concern for the self-esteem of the students is misguided.

A student with high self-esteem but who has trouble reading has little incentive to improve their reading skills because they feel good about themselves. A coach once said it's much easier to make a 7 footer a good basketball player, than (to make) a good basketball player 7 feet tall. the same can be said for a student. It's much easier to improve the self-esteem of a reader, than to teach a struggling reader to read. Self-esteem can be improved in one easy afternoon, reading takes months of hard work.

I feel we need to end the automatic promotion of students to the next grade level regardless of their performance. We need to establish a high but realistic set of standards for our W.U.S.D. students, give them the tools to achieve these standards and then hold them accountable. Accountable means that a student will have to meet certain standards before they move on to the next grade.

Without giving them the proper tools and assistance to achieve these standards, we will cause many students to fail. With the proper tools and programs, most if not all will achieve these high standards. The tools include early intervention, specialists, pullout and after school programs, and for those students that have not met the standards, mandatory summer school.

Chicago, El Paso and other communities have established acountability for their students and it works. In the first year, nearly 15 percent of all Chicago students had mandatory summer school and 2 percent repeated a grade because they could not meet the standards. In the second year of the program the number of students who had mandatory summer school and repeated a grade dropped noticeably, the students got the message that promotion to the next grade was not automatic.

I encourage our school board to develop and adopt a program where we end social promotion, have a high set of standards and expectations, give our students the tools to reach those standards, and hold them accountable. I guarantee that in just two years we will see noticeable and measurable results with such a program.

High expectations with the tools to achieve these expectations leads to great results and success.

rant business, but they can still often be found at Club Pheasant doing what they can to help out and Peter is sure Club Pheasant's future is a bright one.

"We've added more parking space and a new outdoor patio which seats 65 people," said Peter, "and with three new housing subdivisions scheduled to be built in Southport and with all the new jobs which will be created by continued commercial and industrial growth in this area, the Club Pheasant should do very well for years and years to come."

"Running a successful restaurant is a seven day a week job," added Peter. "Even on the day the Club Pheasant is closed, there's stoves to take apart, equipment to be steam cleaned, and everything else needs to be scrubbed as clean as we can get it. But even though it has taken a lot of hard work by a lot of people to make the Club Pheasant into what it is today, it's truly been a labor of love, and it's good to know that Lorraine and I are leaving it in very good hands."

Cabaldon declares for council

West Sacramento City Councilman Christopher Cabaldon announced this week that he will seek re-election to the city council. Cabaldon was elected in a special election in 1996 to fill a two-year term after the council seat was vacated. Cabaldon has been involved in transportation and education issues, and an advocate of increasing economic opportunity in West Sacramento. Cabaldon also advocates fiscal responsibility and public accountability in city government.

"With the support of West Sacramentans, I want to continue to provide independent leadership for all the neighborhoods," Cabaldon said.

On Saturday, August 15, Cabaldon supporters will kick-off the re-election campaign by celebrating the opening of a campaign headquarters. The Cabaldon campaign headquarters will be located at 1420 Merkley Avenue, Suite 6. All are welcome to attend this free event on August 15, which is scheduled to run from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m.

actually on duty and when they were off.

"There's also a desire on the part of this principal to have a little more accountability," he added. "For example, if we're paying these teachers for prep periods (when they are supposed to be preparing lesson plans), we want to know they're here."

A couple of teachers said that Principal Clark and Superintendent Kelleher were leading in a negative, dictatorial manner.

"(Clark's) attitude, as well as Dr. Kelleher's, seems to be that if you don't like it, just leave," said Kathy Hiramoto, a special education teacher. "Well, I've dedicated a big part of my professional life to this school district, and I also happen to love the kids. What we need around here is dialogue and cooperation, not a few administrators telling teachers to take it or leave it."

"When I tried to bring some of our concerns to Dr. Kelleher's attention, he basically told me that Ms. Clark is doing exactly what he and the board of education want her to do, and if we don't like it, then we should try to elect a new board of education in November and then fire him," said Cherry Carroll, a youth outreach specialist. "Now I ask you, what kind of leadership is that? He should be encouraging dialogue and input from everyone, not giving out ultimatums."

Kelleher responded that he had indeed listened to the teachers' concerns -- he just disagreed with them.

"That's their perception," he answered. "I'm sorry if they feel they're not being listened to. My experience is that if you disagree with someone, disagreement doesn't imply you didn't listen, it just means you disagree. I'm listening but I'm not reaching the same conclusions."

Patricia Yamat, president of the WUSD teachers' union, said she was angered that Clark and a school board member had been quoted in a local paper last week in a way which attacked some of the teachers at GSMS.

"Just 12 hours earlier, Kelleher and the Board of Education met to discuss just how best to pass a school bond measure in the next election," said Yamat. "Don't they realize just how damaging this kind of negative and inaccurate publicity is?"

Police Log

July 29, 1:10 p.m.

A man was arrested for an extreme form of self-serve shopping: a security officer at a local supermarket watched a 32-year old West Capitol Ave. man enter the store carrying two of the store's plastic shopping bags, then pick up a gallon of milk, a can of coffee and a box of cereal. The suspect then went to a checkstand and placed all of the items in one of the bags, leaving the store with them making no attempt to pay. The man was placed under citizen's arrest and turned over to police.

Aug. 1, 10:40 a.m.

An officer stopped a man driving at Westacre Rd. and Park Blvd. The driver was arrested for having no driver's license and possessing marijuana.

Aug. 1, 9:15 p.m.

At least the victim's car went on vacation: Rangers from Yosemite National Park contacted West Sacramento Police to report that a car stolen from a Jefferson Blvd., West Sacramento, parking lot had been recovered in Yosemite. A suspect was in custody.

Aug. 2, 8:15 a.m.

A car which had been stolen in Sacramento was recovered near Yolo and Mikon streets in West Sacramento.

Aug. 2, 11:28 a.m.

An elderly man was found dead in a chair in his living room. The victim had recently seen a physician. The county coroner's office declined to respond to the scene.

Aug. 2, 12:21 a.m.

Officers dispatched to Arlington Rd. and Crown Ave. regarding suspects throwing rocks at cars contacted a juvenile they did not believe to be involved in that activity, but who was in violation of curfew. The youth was cited and released to the custody of the youth's parents.

Aug. 3, 7:45 a.m.

Someone reported a break-in through the roof vent of a West Sacramento business. Only a set of keys was missing.

Aug. 3, 8:25 a.m.

Vandalism was reported on 6th St.: all four tires of a car were damaged.

Aug. 3, 5 p.m.

Near the I St. Bridge, an officer saw a subject with blood on his hands. He contacted the man and learned the man had just had a fight with his live-in girlfriend. The woman was located injured at a 3rd St. location with a swollen eye, cut lip, and scratched throat. She was taken to UCD Medical Center and the man arrested.

Aug. 3, 11:50 p.m.

Police responded to a report of trespassers at a middle school's pool: three subjects ran from police but were caught and given notices to appear in court.

Meet artist Bowman on Sat.

By Betty Fairbairn Sokolich
Exhibition Chairperson
East Yolo Friends of the Library

Clyde Bowman is a resident of Davis. He is the husband of Ruth Bowman, school nurse for Washington Unified School District.

Bowman's exhibit is aptly named Driven to Abstraction and he has many examples of a successful search for the unusual in nature and the evidence of man's life on earth. One is "Atop Stone Mountain," where a rift in the earth's crust becomes an abstract patterns of earthy colors and organic shapes rhythmically running across the formal. "Randomness" is another example of how things, in this case, slivers of metal, just lying around, can form a beautiful "random" abstract composition as does "Find a Wheel" bicycle wheels just tossed into a heap of geometric shapes and patterns of light and dark values.

Bowman's exhibit is aptly named 'Driven to Abstraction' and he has many examples of a successful search for the unusual in nature and the evidence of man's life on earth.

"Savannah Alley" with shadows on a brick wall creates a minimalist's composition that never-the-less enhances the viewer's visual experience. Other examples of the minimalist's approach are seen in the "Old Corroded Pail on the Beach" and "Winter Solstice." The rusting pail on the wet sand has few items in the photo yet you can imagine the wet sand on your bare feet thus your perception of the scene is greatly enhanced. A few cat-tails silhouetted against a somber winter sky in "Winter Solstice" brings back memories of the past winter storms. Nature often provides the artist with patterns and shapes that create an intriguing piece of art if the artist is attuned to the possibilities of showing the beauty of the scene. For instance, the organic matter of a "Hornets Nest" lying in a colorful bed of fall leaves intensifies one's awareness of natures beauty. Other examples are found in "Capitol Reflections" and "April Showers I" and "April Showers II."

Sometimes a man made structure provides the light and dark pattern the artist seeks, for instance, the modern skyscraper in "Geometric" and "Dandelion Fountain" with the lone dandelion stem providing the point of interest. In the photo "Savannah Fountain" at night where the dark, mysterious pattern of the water leads your eye up to a glimmering light.

A shrouded figure under a bridge in "Central Park" piques your curiosity. Who is it? Where is he going? The photographer has stimulated your imagination.

A reception for the artist, Clyde Bowman, will be held next Saturday, August 8, from 2 to 4 p.m. The public is welcome to attend to meet the artist and view the photography. The exhibits and reception are sponsored by the East Yolo Friends of the Library.

Elks convene at Disneyland

The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks visited the home of Disneyland this week to craft their own version of "Tomorrowland": a place where volunteerism and leadership build stronger communities and a stronger nation.

The Elks, whose National Convention here was the 134th in their history, are represented locally by West Sacramento Elks Lodge Number 2529, whose Exalted Ruler, or Lodge President, is Gary Wiese of West Sacramento. Local representatives attended the Anaheim convention to help shape the programs and policies of the National Order, which currently boasts more than 1.2 million members nationwide.

The Elks have a long tradition of philanthropic service, sponsoring youth athletic and drug education programs, aid for people with disabilities, college scholarships, cancer and transplantation research, and veterans' service programs. The Elks have also made significant commitments through America's Promise, an organization committed to providing fundamental resources to our Nation's youth.

Among the highlights of the convention were speeches by the two overall winners of the Elks National Free Throw Competition, Adam James Morgan, 13, of Cumberland, MD, and Mary Hall McArver, 13, or Gastonia, NC. They were the best of the more than three million kids, ages 8 to 13, who participated in this year's competition. They were followed to the podium by Ellen Johnson of Dixie, Utah, and Jonathan Tailiaferro of El Dorado, Kansas, the top two winners in the Elks National Foundation's "Most Valuable Student" scholarship contest. Each will receive a four-year scholarships worth $30,000.

Throughout the convention, the 2,200 local Lodges were hailed for their support of the Order's national programs, as well as for their own local programs, and were encouraged to deepen their commitment.

Local Scene

Hoe Down

The West Sacramento Elks Lodge is having an Old Fashioned County Hoe Down on August 22 beginning at 5 p.m. with cocktails and followed by dinner and music. Food will consist of country ribs and fixins. There will be a western costume contest and music by The Country Memories. Cost is a donation of $10. For more information, call 372-6658.

Kindergarten Sign-Ups

Do you have children entering kindergarten? The YMCA is now enrolling children for AM kindergarten. Children will enjoy tours, planned activities, and homework time. Contact Karen Doughty at 373-5849. Limited spaces are available for children attending Evergreen Elementary. Sign-ups will be taken beginning August 10 through August 21.

Southport School BBQ

Southport Elementary School PTA is sponsoring a get-together BBQ at the school on Thursday, August 13, from 6 to 8 p.m. in the school quad area. Please bring your lawn chairs and blankets. There will be musical entertainment, too. The BBQ is free of charge. If you want to give a donation, we ask that you give a donation of a book to our school library.

Senior Spin

"Senior Spin," the West Sacramento Senior Center's takeoff on the popular "Wheel of Fortune" TV game show, is back on Charter Cable TV. It repeats on Channel 21 sevens days a week starting at 6:30 p.m., plus every Wednesday at 7 p.m. The current show starts contestants Jack Caldeira, Armilda Bartlett and Cecila Hilliker. Gladys Neighbours is host and Dee Bowen is "Vana Banana." Be sure to watch and see who wins the first place $25 gift certificate donated by the West Sacramento Canned Foods Grocery Outlet.

Church Celebration

At 11 a.m. on August 16 at 1400 Anna Street in West Sacramento, the Anna Street Baptist Church (originally the Elkhorn Baptist Church) will be recognizing its 35th anniversary. All previous members and friends are invited to join with the present members of the church for a time of recognition, celebration and worship. The service will be longer than normal and will be followed by a meal at the church building.

Fair Rodeo/Derby

Reserved seats for the arena events at the Yolo County Fair are now on sale to the general public between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. in the main office of the fairgrounds. The Western Rodeo will be Thursday and Friday, August 20-21 and reserved seats for this event are $7. General admission seats are $6 for adults and $4 for children 11 and under. Thursday a special family ticket is available, admitting 2 adults and 3 children 16 and under for $12. The Demolition Derby returns Saturday and Sunday evenings, August 22-23, and seating is reserved only. The cost per ticket is $8. All tickets for the derby and the rodeo are on a cash-only basis. Remember that derby tickets always sell out quickly, so be sure to get yours early. Please contact the fair office at (530) 662-5393 for additional information.
